

Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts and Healthbox Partner to Foster and Support Innovative Health Care Startups in Massachusetts

State's largest private health plan celebrates its 75th anniversary by partnering with leading startup incubator to help ten promising local health care companies grow

BOSTON — August 13, 2012 — Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts (BCBSMA) and Healthbox, a company that supports early-stage health care innovation and entrepreneurship, announced today they are leading a partnership to accelerate the businesses of ten Massachusetts-based health care companies. The promising companies are addressing issues of strategic importance in health care, including patient engagement, provider effectiveness and wellness.

"We are thrilled to be partnering with Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts who has embraced our vision of supporting health care entrepreneurs and unlocking the industry knowledge needed to build game-changing companies," said Nina Nashif, Founder of Healthbox. "Having the strong support of a large and innovative health plan will advance groundbreaking solutions for the industry's most pressing challenges."

Each of the ten companies selected will receive $50,000 in seed capital, access to a mentor network of industry experts including BCBSMA employees, strategic guidance and collaborative workspace. The program launches this month and will conclude with a high-profile conference in November where each participant will pitch their company to an audience of investors and health care leaders from across the country.

"Since our company's inception 75 years ago, Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts has continually worked hard to develop new and innovative ways to make health care more affordable while improving the quality of that care," said Andrew Dreyfus, President and CEO of BCBSMA. "Participating in the development of new solutions that aim to tackle the most pressing challenges in the industry supports our mission to make quality health care affordable for individuals, families and employers while adding growth to our local economy."

The ten companies selected are focusing on issues of great importance for the health care industry:

Patient Engagement — four companies will help patients more proactively manage their health:

- Aavya Health is developing software that presents patient lab results in an understandable and actionable format
- Abiogenix will improve medical adherence by giving patients an intelligent pillbox that reminds, records and restricts when patients take their medication
- GeckoCap will monitor pediatric asthma adherence by tracking information, providing reminders and linking to incentives
- Uprise Medical is developing interactive multi-media software to help physicians educate patients about their condition

Provider Effectiveness — four companies are improving physician practice operations:

- iQuartric developed a technology platform that aggregates real-time EMR data from across multiple clinical care settings
- Gweepi Medical is creating an intelligent moisture-sensor for long-term care facilities
- Smart Scheduling developed software that solves primary care no-show rates and over-booking by building smarter schedules based on predictive-modeling techniques
- Yosko created a user-friendly graphic interface for electronic health records that provides physicians with on-the-go access to patient records

Wellness — two companies will empower consumers to be more conscious of their eating habits and health choices:

- Bon'App provides easy-to-understand nutrition information and tracks eating patterns via a mobile app
- Healthy Delivery offers healthy meals and corresponding groceries for home delivery

"Changing the status quo in health care can be difficult, but having a cadre of world-class mentors and partners to help us navigate the industry should boost our chances of success," said Smart Scheduling Founder Dr. Gabriel Belfort. "We're looking forward to working with Healthbox, BCBSMA and the other strategic partners over the course of the coming months."

Healthbox has attracted seasoned professionals with health care and business experience who are focused on addressing real challenges in the industry and thinking creatively about new solutions. Entrepreneurs who have worked with Healthbox have been given the opportunity to refine their value propositions and gain market traction and insight in a very short period of time. BCBSMA is the anchor partner for Healthbox-Boston. Other strategic partners include Express Scripts, HLM Venture Partners and Long River Ventures. These organizations will work collaboratively with Healthbox to support and mentor the ten startups over the next three months.
