

DISH Network Launches American Muslim Network

EchoStar Communications Corporation (NASDAQ: DISH) announced today that its DISH Network™ satellite television service has added Bridges TV, an English-language American Muslim network, to its programming lineup. Bridges TV fuses American culture with the values of Islam to produce family-oriented television. "Bridges TV richly enhances our multicultural channel menu and allows us to address a traditionally underserved, but steadily growing generation of American Muslims," said Eric Sahl, vice president of Programming at EchoStar. "The Muslim culture has fascinated and intrigued Americans, especially in recent years. Our programming now reflects that trend."

Subscribers can enjoy shows such as Each Other, which spotlights a Muslim girl trying to succeed as a big-city reporter; Salam America, a daily morning show; and Bridges News, the network's original daily newscast. The network also offers family-friendly sitcoms, cartoons, educational programming and movies that bring American Muslim issues to the forefront.

"We are extremely proud to be the first to create a television marketplace for the American Muslim community," said Bridges TV CEO Muzzammil Hassan. "We are excited about our partnership with DISH Network, which has provided every American interested in Muslim cultures, lifestyle and Islam, the opportunity to bring Bridges TV into their homes."

Customers can subscribe to Bridges TV on an "a la carte" basis for only $14.99 per month with qualifying programming. Bridges TV is broadcast from the 61.5 and 148 degree orbital locations. A second dish may be necessary for some subscribers to view Bridges TV.
