CareerBuilder.com announced today it led the industry in delivering the most job seekers to companies recruiting online in the first quarter of 2004. The CareerBuilder Network* attracted 15.7 million unique visitors in March, beating out its largest competitors in true job seeker traffic for three consecutive months, according to a specialized job seeker report from comScore Media Metrix. In addition, the CareerBuilder Network saw a 100 percent year over year increase in the number of job applications it brought to employers.

"Job creation is on the rise and companies are starting to recruit at a more accelerated pace," said Matt Ferguson, President and Chief Operating Officer for CareerBuilder.com. "To stay competitive, companies need quick access to the greatest amount of relevant job seekers for their open positions. CareerBuilder.com has proven that we dominate in this area, reinforcing our overall leadership position in the industry."

Traffic for the CareerBuilder Network grew significantly over 2003 as the company expanded its distribution base and brand awareness, escalated its sales efforts and captured more market share. Comparing March 2004 to March 2003, the CareerBuilder Network increased its job seeker traffic by 124 percent. In February, the 14.7 million unique visitors who came to the site accounted for a 127 percent year over year increase.
