Strong leadership drove CareerBuilder.com to the number one position in online recruitment this year with the company outpacing the industry in traffic, job postings and revenue growth. The CareerBuilder Network has consistently attracted the highest amount of true job seeker traffic every month with a 155 percent increase year over year in April, according to the latest report from comScore Media Metrix. At the same time, CareerBuilder.com increased its job postings by 52 percent and nearly doubled its applications delivered to employers.

In the first quarter of 2004, the CareerBuilder Network increased its revenue 66 percent year over year and 25 percent over the previous quarter. This builds on the upward trend seen in 2003 when the CareerBuilder Network increased its annual revenue by 48 percent.

As CEO and president of CareerBuilder.com, Ferguson will continue to lead the daily operations and growth of the company, overseeing all marketing, finance, sales, information technology, product development, integrated media and business development.

Ferguson first joined the company two and a half years ago following CareerBuilder.com's acquisition of Headhunter.net, where he had been serving as senior vice president of business development since 2000. Prior to that, Ferguson developed strategic partnerships for DigitalWork.com. He also started two entrepreneurial ventures, and practiced law at Baker & McKenzie. Ferguson holds a master's in business administration from the University of Chicago and a law degree from Northwestern University.

"The online recruitment industry has experienced a major shift in competitive positioning with CareerBuilder.com moving into the lead," said Montgomery. "All of our efforts to expand operations, increase our user base and capture more market share are pointing to this moment when we will bring the company to the next level. As a proven leader, keen strategist and skilled businessman, Matt is the person we want taking over the helm to drive profitability and sustainable growth across our vast network."
