Ensuring Your Vote is Counted

In advance of the Record Date, Capitol advises holders of its securities to move these securities into accounts that do not permit the lending of securities, so called cash accounts or segregated accounts, and out of accounts that permit the lending of securities, such as margin accounts. These steps are designed to ensure that votes related to common stock beneficially owned by stockholders are properly counted. Beneficial owners of shares of common stock that have been lent out (either with or without the beneficial owners' knowledge) are not permitted to vote those shares.
