

DISH Network Reaches Agreement to Deliver Univision, TeleFutura and Galavisión to DISH Network Customers

DISH Network Corporation (Nasdaq: DISH), a leading distributor of Spanish-language programming in the United States, today announced a multi-year agreement with Univision Communications Inc., the premier Spanish-language media company in the United States. The agreement includes carriage of Univision's owned and operated broadcast stations, and distribution of Univision, TeleFutura and Galavisión network feeds.

"For more than a decade, DISH Network has been dedicated to providing the best Latino programming at the lowest possible prices," said Charlie Ergen, Chairman, CEO and President of DISH Network. "This new agreement with Univision demonstrates our continued commitment to the Latino community by delivering some of the highest quality Spanish-language programming available anywhere."

"We look forward to this long-term partnership with DISH Network," said Joe Uva, CEO of Univision Communications Inc. "We would both like to thank our viewers and DISH Network customers for their patience and support during the negotiations."

The terms of the agreement were not disclosed.
