

Business Travel to Increase in 2014 According to Survey of Very Frequent Travelers

Road Warriors Show Loyalty, Work Out and Stay Connected While Traveling

NEW YORK, Dec. 17, 2013 /PRNewswire/ -- Business travel will increase substantially in 2014 and trigger growth in the travel and hospitality industries according to a new survey conducted by Frequent Business Traveler magazine and published online at <http://accura.cc/j43tkv>.

For the second consecutive year, over one-third (35.7 percent) of business travelers surveyed said they will travel more in the coming year than the current one, while almost half (47.2 percent) said they will travel the same amount. The survey also highlighted several trends in business travel including membership in frequent flyer and hotel loyalty programs, traveler loyalty to hotel chains and airline alliances and preferences about where travelers prefer to work and eat.

The survey was conducted during the last quarter of 2013 in association with FlyerTalk, the world's largest online travel community, and polled 1,323 frequent business travelers.

"Business travelers are professional travelers and they need to balance this aspect of their lives with getting the job done when they get to their destination," said Jonathan Spira, Frequent Business Traveler magazine's editorial director. "The amenities and services they require are not always what hotels and airlines provide, and travel executives need to pay heed to what the business traveler is saying."

Other key findings of the survey include:

- Hotels and airlines need to do far more to ensure a more consistent experience for travelers, as 88 percent of hotel guests and 76 percent of airline passengers say their experiences are inconsistent. Last year, 83 percent of hotel guests and 77 percent of airline passengers had similar complaints.
- Business travelers are more loyal to airline programs than they are to hotel loyalty programs but not as much as less year's respondents. Almost 75 percent said they would fly with a preferred airline or alliance even if a flight were not as convenient (80 percent in 2012), compared to the 45 percent who said they would stay at a less-conveniently situated hotel in order to stay with a particular brand (58 percent a year ago).
- Wi-Fi continues to impact buying decisions. One quarter of survey respondents who use it say that the availability of in-flight Wi-Fi impacts their choice of airline and flight while 73 percent say that they look for free Wi-Fi when selecting a hotel. The percentages are virtually unchanged from last year.
