

MPOWER Financing Crosses $300 Million in Financing Capacity to Support International Students' Education

Debt financing from Deutsche Bank, Goldman Sachs, and Värde Partners fuel MPOWER's growing international student loan portfolio.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7, 2023 /PRNewswire/ -- MPOWER Financing ("MPOWER"), a mission-driven fintech firm and the leading provider of non-cosigned loans to promising students from around the world, today announced that it has closed on debt financing that has propelled the firm's overall lending capacity to over $300 million. Active funding includes commitments from Deutsche Bank, Goldman Sachs, and Värde Partners.

We're delighted to work with best-in-class investment firms who share our vision of empowering the best & brightest

These financings will fund MPOWER's rapidly growing portfolio of loans issued to international students attending one of 400+ leading colleges and universities across the U.S. and Canada. Last year, both the U.S. and Canada reached record levels of enrollment for new international students.

"We're delighted to be working with best-in-class investment firms who share our vision of empowering the best & brightest from around the world," said Manu

Smadja, Chief Executive Officer of MPOWER Financing. "This financing is critical for us as our growth continues to be exponential. More graduate students than ever before want to come study in North America, particularly in STEM and business fields. Meanwhile, the U.S. and Canada are in dire need of tech talent, business leaders, and healthcare workers. Our growing financing capabilities are a reflection of these macro trends and our ability to execute in both growth and credit quality in this market."

"These investors were impressed by our nine-year track record, steady credit quality through Covid and varying rate environments, and ultimately by the quality of students we lend to: graduate students, primarily in STEM at top universities, who leave everything behind in their home countries to invest in their futures," said Christopher Zaki, Head of Capital Markets at MPOWER Financing. "The portfolio also provides for natural diversification, as MPOWER supports students from around the world, and offers returns that are uncorrelated with traditional asset classes."
