

IBM Research Director Arvind Krishna to Outline Blockchain's Impact Across Industries During Consensus 2017 Keynote

ARMONK, N.Y., May 19, 2017 /PRNewswire/ -- IBM (NYSE:IBM) today announced that Arvind Krishna, senior vice president Hybrid Cloud and director of IBM Research, will deliver a keynote speech at the Consensus 2017 blockchain technology summit on May 22 at 9:30 a.m. Krishna will discuss how blockchain is creating efficiencies and transforming industries during his talk at the Consensus event, which will be held at the New York Marriott Marquis May 22-24.

Krishna's presentation, "From Capital Markets to Supply Chains: Reimagining Business Networks with Blockchain," will outline and illustrate how IBM has engaged with more than 400 companies to help them apply blockchain technologies across their businesses and industries.

For more information on IBM's blockchain-based solutions, visit here.

For more information about Consensus 2017, which is hosted by CoinDesk, visit here.

About IBM Research

For more than seven decades, IBM Research has defined the future of information technology with more than 3,000 researchers in 12 labs located across six continents. Scientists from IBM Research have produced six Nobel Laureates, a U.S. Presidential Medal of Freedom, 10 U.S. National Medals of Technology, five U.S. National Medals of Science, six Turing Awards, 19 inductees in the U.S. National Academy of Sciences and 20 inductees into the U.S. National Inventors Hall of Fame. For more information about IBM Research, visit www.ibm.com/research.

CONTACT:

Chris Andrews

IBM Media Relations

914-945-1630

candrews@us.ibm.com

SOURCE IBM
