

FRANK'S REDHOT® GOES "FEAST MODE" FOR THE HOLIDAYS

Spicy Survey Results Show 93% of Respondents Prefer Some Level of Heat in Their Food

HUNT VALLEY, Md., Nov. 17, 2022 /PRNewswire/ -- If you tend to reach for spicier foods, chances are you lead a spicier life. That's according to a new survey commissioned by Frank's RedHot®, the #1 hot sauce in the world*, which sought to learn about consumer preferences and uncover trends as we return to pre-pandemic holiday gatherings and feasts.

The survey explored personality correlations between people who are spicy food enthusiasts, targeting adults who celebrate winter holidays, to discover how they are adding heat to upcoming family meals.

Some of the key findings got saucy:

- 93% of respondents prefer some level of heat in their food. Nearly four in 10 (36%) say they go for medium, 33% go for mild, and 24% like their spice level set to hot.
- Spicy food eaters are more likely to enjoy trying new things (76%), consider themselves attractive (62%), and are more content with their lives (66%) than milder heat lovers.
- Those who like to kick it up a notch are also more likely to describe themselves as creative (54%), confident (51%), and adventurous (44%), as opposed to mild heat lovers who are more likely to describe themselves as empathetic (41%) and shy (37%).
- Almost one-third (32%) of spicy food fans follow a certain diet like vegan or vegetarian — more than double the number of mild heat fans (13%) and more than any other heat preference.
- During the holiday season, medium heat fans consider themselves the best gift givers (56%). However, hot food fanatics are most likely to be tasting the food (48%) or "stirring the pot" causing drama or trouble with friends and family (11%).
- More than one-third (35%) of respondents are tired of eating the same things each holiday season and identified potatoes (46%) and meats (41%) as some of the top blandest foods.
- Respondents are also planning to mix things up in the kitchen this year, with 45% planning to cook different recipes, and 42% wanting to try new foods.
- To amp up flavor, respondents are adding seasoning (44%), mixing unique flavors (39%), and including sauces like hot sauce or a marinade (39%).

"It makes perfect sense that those who take the heat head on are ready to take on anything and everything else. Our loyal fans go big on both flavor and adventure, and they're always chasing the spice of life," said Kevan Vetter, Executive Chef for McCormick®. "For the holidays, we eat the same dishes every year, and people are ready for imaginative recipes and new takes on the classics. Frank's RedHot is the perfect antidote to boring food, infusing dishes with bold flavors and a craveable kick in seconds."

Survey respondents will be happy to learn that Frank's RedHot launched the Frank's RedHot Injector Marinade earlier this month to help enhance average holiday dishes by increasing the heat. This versatile ingredient also makes a great holiday gift for foodies and hot sauce enthusiasts alike.
