

Children's Health Collaborative Invests in New Initiatives to Support Children in Central Florida

Grants Totaling $200,000 Will Address Mental Health, Nutrition, Education, and Economic Stability

ORLANDO, Fla. (Oct. 30, 2025) – Efforts to enhance the health and well-being of children in Central Florida have received a boost with the announcement of $200,000 in grants awarded to four impactful community-based initiatives by the Children's Health Collaborative.

Funded by the Ginsburg Institute at Nemours Children's Health, Heart of Florida United Way \(HFUW\), and the Marianna D. Pratt Focus & Collaboration Initiative, the initiatives are designed to promote a comprehensive approach to child well-being that extends beyond traditional medical care.

"Our collective investment reflects a deep commitment to ensure that children's health and well-being are influenced not only by medical care but by the full spectrum of resources and support available to them as they live, learn, and grow," said Nancy Molello, Executive Director of the Ginsburg Institute at Nemours Children's Health. "By investing in community-based solutions, we are taking critical steps toward building a healthier, more vibrant future for Central Florida's children."

The recipients and their initiatives are as follows:

- Peace and Justice Institute, ArtReach Orlando, Millennium Middle School (Mental Health)
This collaborative initiative will implement an arts-integrated program aimed at creating a healing-centered educational environment for students at Millennium Middle School.
- Cristo Rey High School, HEBNI Nutrition, and Second Harvest Food Bank of Central Florida (Healthy Food & Nutrition)
Focusing on Orlando's Oak Ridge community, this initiative will provide nutritional education, access to healthy food, sustainable gardening, and physical fitness resources to address gaps in food access and health literacy for students at Cristo Rey Orlando High School.
- Early Learning Coalition of Orange County and Orange County Public Schools (Quality Education)
This project seeks to improve the transition from preschool to kindergarten, enhancing school readiness for children. The initiative will emphasize access to quality education, family support, and early developmental resources.
- Community Legal Services and The Sharing Center (Economic Stability)
These organizations will collaborate to address the legal barriers faced by low-income individuals, including those experiencing homelessness in Seminole County. They will provide legal assistance, access to benefits, and job training programs to promote economic stability.

"We are proud to be part of the Children's Health Collaborative because we believe that an investment in children is an investment in Central Florida's future," Jeff Hayward, President and CEO of HFUW. "By addressing key factors like mental health, nutrition, education, and economic stability, we are not only helping children thrive but also strengthening the family unit that supports them. When families are stable and healthy, children are better positioned to succeed today and for generations to come."

Each of the four selected initiatives will receive $50,000 to support the implementation of their impactful projects. Applicants were required to submit proposals demonstrating collaboration between at least two local organizations while addressing one or more of the designated opportunity areas.

“The Marianna D. Pratt Focus & Collaboration Initiative is pleased to partner with Heart of Florida United Way in funding four impactful grants. We look forward to seeing the meaningful outcomes these investments will generate, helping to foster a stronger more supportive community where our children can thrive.”

The Children’s Health Collaborative is a consortium of more than 100 organizations across Central Florida, working together to enhance the health and well-being of children while strengthening community partnerships throughout the region.

In the coming weeks, grant recipients will have the opportunity to compete in the Spark Tank event where they will showcase how their initiatives will advance children’s health. A winner at the Spark Tank will be awarded additional funding to support their community-based program.
