- Stylish and sustainable, the baubles have been made in the UK from 100% recycled plastic

2nd December 2025: Subway® is launching a free limited-edition range of Christmas tree decorations inspired by its most popular sauces after new research revealed a seismic shake-up in the culinary accompaniments that will be adorning UK tables this year.

Young Brits are leading a saucy shake up of festive traditions, a new survey has found, as 43% of Gen Z would choose a non-traditional condiment like ketchup over gravy to accompany their festive meal. More than half (51%) of Gen Zs admit to adding a dollop of mayonnaise to their Christmas dinner, with even more (56%) choosing to lather it in ketchup.

With almost six in 10 (58%) Brits saying they would find it hard to live without their favourite condiment, Subway is celebrating this unwavering passion with the launch of a line of free festive baubles inspired by its most popular sauces – Chipotle Southwest, Sweet Onion, and Honey Mustard.

Up for grabs in a free giveaway from 10am today (2nd December) in the first of two drops, Subway's bespoke baubles are the perfect gift for shameless sauce enthusiasts this festive season. More than half (51%) of the nation agree Christmas dinner would be ruined without their favourite condiment, but many younger Brits will be reaching for more than just the gravy boat this Christmas.

What some may consider an act of saucy sacrilege, some quirky condiments Gen Z have paired with their Christmas dinner include curry sauce (39%), sriracha (36%), salad cream (25%), barbeque sauce (21%), and sweet chilli sauce (21%). A generation of sauce enthusiasts, 44% of Gen Z Brits have had an argument with friends or family on the divisive topic of condiments, while 43% have even turned down a meal because their favourite wasn't available. Almost a third (32%) have taken matters into their own hands by bringing their favourite sauce out with them to dinner, and nearly a quarter (24%) admit to consuming a condiment straight from the bottle.

EMEA Senior Marketing Director at Subway® Kirstey Elston, said: "There's no denying that Brits take their sauces seriously, and we love seeing what unique flavour combinations our customers come up with. The sauce is what makes the Sub, and to celebrate this, we've created our own baubles inspired by some fan favourites. And to spread some joy this Christmas, they're up for grabs for free."

Subway's festive baubles are made in the UK from 100% recycled plastic and will be available for free at subway-merch.com from 10am on 2nd December. They're available while stocks last, so get in there quick! And be sure to keep your eyes on Subway's socials for news of a second drop in the lead up to Christmas...

Subway also recently unveiled its festive menu for 2025, featuring the brand-new Ultimate Festive Sub and Ultimate Festive Spud, alongside other new festive items including a Turkey & Stuffing Footlong Dipper and limited-edition Double Chocolate Orange Cookie – available now nationwide. And with physical and digital gift cards available too, fans can now share their love of Subway in a way that suits them – offering even more convenience, flexibility and delicious possibilities this Christmas.
